VI- Reading Comprehension & Summary Making (150 Marks)

A) Read the following passage, then answer the questions below:

Real police men hardly find any similarity between their lives and what they see on TV. There are similarities of course as well as differences, but the cops don't think much of them. The first difference is that a policeman's real life revolves around law .Most of his training is in criminal law. He has to know what actions are crimes and what evidences can be used to prove them in court .He needs also to apply these evidences everywhere and every time. He needs to know nearly as much law as a professional lawyer.

Secondly, most television crime drama is about finding the criminal and as soon as he is arrested, the story is over .But in real life finding the criminal is not such a big problem except in very serious cases like murder and terrorist attacks. Having arrested criminals, a detective really starts searching for a lot of evidences, wanting help from people who in fact- don't want to get involved in a court case .He has to be out all the day round.

The last one of these differences is that detectives are subject to many pressures: one of them is; as members of the police force, they have always to behave in a special way. However, most of the time some of them have to break the rules in small ways. If the detective has to deceive the world, the world often deceives him. He hardly meets anyone who tells the truth. Besides, society doesn't punish criminals severely enough.

Police work by its very nature is dangerous. The essence of being a police officer requires the people sporting the badge and gun to continually expose themselves to situations that are hazardous and often life threatening. Proper training can often mean the difference between success and failure, life or death. Proper training protects the public as well. An officer well versed in investigative techniques will be able to get the facts of a situation and be able to figure out exactly what happened just by asking the right questions and collecting the correct evidence. Police work is definitely not for everyone. Simply surviving the academy and the field-training period can be mentally draining and physically stressful. However, just like getting dressed or riding a bike, the skills, knowledge and techniques become second nature to the officer, allowing him to successfully protect himself, his colleagues and the general public.
